OHIO FARMERS CROWNED WITH LAURELS

TWO SONS OF OLD PICKAWAY AWARDED HONORS AND MEDALS

Masters of Corn, Wheat, Potatoes and Pork Yields are Awarded Prizes By Dean Alfred Vivian—Bruce Stevenson in 300 Bushel Potato Class; Homer Cromley, of Ashville, in the Hundred Bushel Corn Club; Val Valentine, of Stoutsville, and Dressbach & Anderson and L. F. Bower, of Kingston, in the Ton Litter Class.

Medals may be worn in peacetime as in war. This was demonstrated Friday when 73 Ohio farmers were given medals and made members of Ohio's honor clubs for masters of corn, wheat, potato and pork production by Dean Alfred Vivian of the college of agriculture, Ohio State university.

On this tenth anniversary of the 100-Bushel Corn club of Ohio nine farmers were admitted to membership because they had grown this past season 100 or more bushels of corn on an acre on 10 acres. This club now has a membership of 100 men, living in 37 Ohio counties.

Members of 100-Bushel Corn club who were honored are Edgar Bixie, Bluffton; Jenaro Wolfe, Sabina; Orville Beane, Arcanum; John C. Cannon, Washington C. H.; Ira C. Marshall; Dola; Glenn Marshall, Dola; Ward Marshall, Brookville; Howard Eby, Trotwood, and Homer Cromley, Ashville.

The 40-Bushel Wheat club, now in its third year, added 20 names to the roster, making a total of 28 men in the club. To qualify a man must grow 40 bushels of wheat on an acre on 10 acres.

New members are Urban H. Troeger, Defiance; Clark A. Given, Galion; Clarence Cash, Metamora; W. G. Pfaff Swanton; Walter D. Feller, Mt. Blanchard; F. Harold Wells, Croton; James Iler, Utica; H. J. Longnecker, Whitehouse; D. A. Lathrop & Sons, Berkey; Irvin Blaystone, Berkey; Matt Irmey, East Toledo; Clarence L. Slack, Tringwan; Clark H. Cunningham, Oakwood; H. H. Casselman, Old Fort; C. L. Earl Old Fort; D. W. Galehouse, Marshallville; H. J. Newcomer, Bryan; W. C. Weigle, Montpelier; Paul Smith, W. Unity and L. O. Crook, Bryan.

The 300-Bushel Potato club, in its second year, added nine men to membership, making a total of 12 members. Membership in this club is obtained by growing 300 bushels of potatoes on an acre on two acres.

Additions to the club are W. A. Shillito, Andover; Thompson Brothers, Burton; Isaac C. Widdle, Casttown; E. M. Wissinifer, West Milton; George B. Stevenson, Circleville; Stephen Bockler, Republic, and W. B. McKien, Greenspring.

Thirty-five Ohio farmers this past season qualified for the Ohio Ton-Litter club by producing a ton of pork in 180 days from one litter of pigs. This club, in its fourth year, now has 112 members. William C. Taylor of Butler county won a special medal for having raised a ton-litter for the fourth consecutive year.

New members of this organization are Copeland Brothers, Wapakoneta; Martin Katter, Wapakoneta; R. C. Stewart, St. Marys; William C. Taylor, Collinsville; M. C. Sanor, East Rochester; J. W. Shiefer, Bucyrus; Calvin Tracht, Galion; F. S. Applegate, Hicksville; Walter Derge, Defiance; R. Richardson, Farmer; Howard Cole, Ashley; E. E. Echelberger, Washington C. H.; J. A. Purtell & Son, Leesburg; Val Valentine, Stoutsville; Charles Behem Jackson; R. O. Wren, Lewiston; R. C. Lamb, Washingtonville; J. R. Manchester, Berlin Center; Eldridge Hawn Troy; R. H. Rymers, Elmore; Urgan Wagner, Oak Harbor; Oscar Anspach Thornville; L. M. Poorman, Glenford; E. H. Rambo, Roseville; Dressbach & Anderson, Kingston; G. N. Lockbaum Waverly; George Rea, Idaho.

E. J. Hathaway, Columbus Grove; H. H. Wolf, Shelby; L. F. Bower, Kingston; C. W. Edgington, Lyndon; Charles Weaver, Haverhill; R. Renninger, Tiffin; Carlyle Walter, Bascom and F. G. Davidson, Sidney.

Men who won membership in these clubs did so by doubling and in many cases trebling the state's average yield per acre or per unit.

The emphasis in these clubs, college officials explain it not on greater total production, but on greater production per acre or per unit of live stock, thereby making it possible to grow more on less land than formerly.

RESTAURANT BURGLARIZED.

The restaurant of Denny Pickens was entered Friday evening. The burglar effected an entrance thru a side window. As soon as the marauder got inside he turned off the gas light and then ransacked the place. Some cigars and a chewing gum machine were taken. The machine had not been emptied for a week and how much money it contained is unknown. Mr. Pickens thinks the machine contained between $8 and $10.

BURGLARS CALL AGAIN.

The National 5 & 10c store seems to be quite a favorite site for night marauders. The place was broken into again Friday evening for the second time in one week. Tuesday night Mr. Closson was relieved of about $9, change, money left in nine different registers. The burglar did the same act Friday night, entering the store and again rifled the registers of their contents. The store was entered in the rear by smashing a window.

Big Judgment.

The condemnation proceedings instituted by the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company against the Mid-West Box company, a subsidiary of The Container Corporation of America which has held the attention of Judge Adkins and a jury in the probate court for the past four days, was finally ended Friday, when the jury gave judgment against the railroad company for the sum of $133,000. Of this amount $125,000 was allowed for damages and $8,000 for 3.45 acres of land that the company will use as right-of-way thru the grounds of the Mid-West plant.

The Mid-West company asked for $328,000. Of this amount $280,000 was for damages and $48,000 for land.

General Manager Charles E. Raney of the Container corporation, together with A. C. Moore, manager of The Mid-West Box company, were interviewed shortly after the judgment was given and both claimed that the amount of the judgment is not in keeping with expense of building sheds over the straw ricks. The company officials estimate that it will cost in the neighborhood of $280,000 alone to build sheds. It is thought that the company will decide in a few days, whether to accept the judgment or take an appeal to a higher court.

The judgment given by the jury Friday to the Mid-West is the largest given so far in condemnation proceedings against the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company. It is understood that the railroad company made a settlement Friday with James I. Smith, paying him $16,750 to go thru his farm appropriating 4 1/4 acres of land. According to this settlement this leaves but one suit on the docket that of the Esmeralda Canning company which comes up next Tuesday in the probate court before a jury.

Fred C. Rector, of the firm of Wilson & Rector, of Columbus, and Charles H. May, of this city, represented the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company and Lewis C. Fauber, of Elyria and Irvin F. Snyder, of this city are the attorneys for the Mid-West Box company.

NEW COW'S MENU

Alfalfa, Grown on the Farm, Replaces Bran In Bossy's Meals

Dairy cows require high protein feeds for profitable milk production. While these can be supplied by feeding non-leguminous hay and expensive purchased concentrates, the latter can be replaced to a considerable extent by legumes, according to the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. Alfalfa hay is especially suited for this purpose, because of its palatability, easy digestibility and its cooling and laxative effect.

Two lots of cows receiving a ration containing 6 lbs. corn meal, 30 lbs. corn silage, 6 lbs. clover hay and 8 lbs. wheat bran at the Illinois Experiment Station produced 23.8 pounds milk a day. The same ration with the exception of wheat bran, which was replaced by an equal weight of alfalfa hay, made an average production of 24.4 pounds milk, thus demonstrating that alfalfa hay for dairy cows in milk is at least equal to wheat bran, pound for pound. In such a ration wheat bran, which at present prices costs the farmer around $30 a ton, is replaced entirely by the farm grown alfalfa hay.

The Ontario Experimental Farm found that with alfalfa hay and silage a cow will maintain her milk flow on a very small corn ration, and with cows well along in milk corn meal may be omitted entirely without decreasing the production.

Whenever alfalfa replaces a large extent the high priced concentrates, the profits from the sale of milk and butterfat are increased. Not only is alfalfa superior to grass hays for feeding dairy cows, but it is equal, if not superior, to hay made from the other clover, and its yields are

Sauerkraut for Endurance

"I find your gym work a bit strenuous, Professor Edwards, perhaps I need a tonic to build me up for it."

"What do you eat?"

"Oh, a man-size beefsteak, plenty of potatoes, some vegetables, now and then home-made pie."

"A Russian soldier can pack a heavier burden and march much longer over roads of ice and mud than any other trooper. Do you know what his ration is?"

"No, I don't."

"Black bread, meat, salt, beer, barley and sauerkraut."

"But black bread is difficult to get in this country, and as for beer—"

"But sauerkraut costs about fifteen cents a can and contains to the pound 125 calories energy value. As for a tonic—it's the best health medicine, according to German physicians, under the sun. It is only recently that people are realizing how high it is in vitamins, how rich in mineral salts and iron for the blood. And it contains calcium too, which is the bone-building substance."

"You spoke of it as a medicine—"

"Authorities of Vienna recommend it to prevent hardening of the arteries; it is recognized as a cure for diabetes and lumbago."

"Well, it sounds like a man's dish."

"A woman's too, since most women are reducing and all women want beautiful complexions. I'll tip you off to a good drink—a sauerkraut cocktail. Take the juice in a shaker with some ice, (you can buy the juice canned) and serve it cold in one of these pre-historic high glasses—"

"I get you, Professor. It sounds good. I think you'll find me pepped up more from now on."

New Can Keeps Candy Fit

"OH! boy—but I'm hungry!" And you'd be hungry too, if you had battered down a few snow forts, creased down long hills and dragged your sled up again, and done the thousand and one things a regular fellow has to do when school is out.

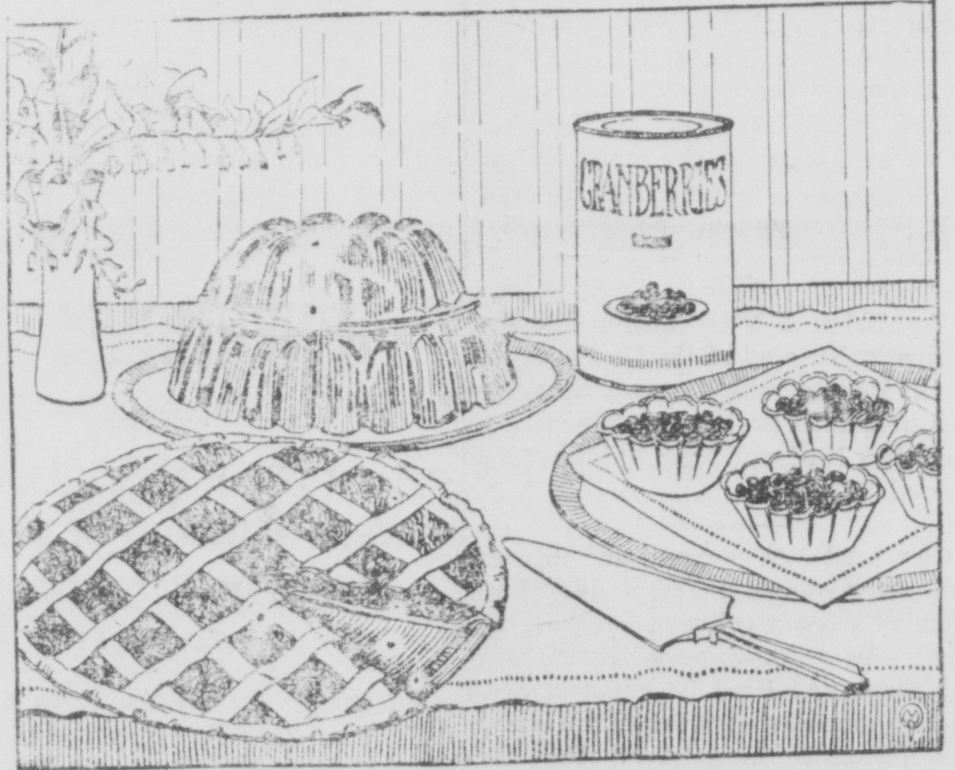

The warm wholesome foods—roasted sandwiches and chocolate malted milk perhaps—tasted like a million dollars. But just before a fellow is ready to go out into the snow again, he wants something to stuff in his pockets and take along. If this something happens to be candy—hooray!

The problem of keeping candy fresh, so that one can have it at any time, has just been solved through the making of a can which may be packed by a brand-new process. The secret of the new can is the vitapak method which packs candies in gas without vacuum so that if they stand on the dealer's shelf or on your shelf for a month, or a year, they are as fresh when opened as it packed that day.

The beauty of this new can from the mother's angle is that when the children have helped themselves, the can may be covered again, and the tightly fitting "lid" insures the candy keeping fresh even to the last piece. A herringbone score key opening makes the lid easy to remove and a tight collar closes it securely.

Not only hard candies and chocolate-coated nuts, but also chocolate creams and soft-centered bonbons are available in these new cans. The gas used in packing, provides insurance against bug life which often presents a serious problem where nuts and certain fruits are used.

Cranberry Sauce In Cans

URKEY time is no longer the only time for cranberries. With cranberry sauce now on the market in cans, we may enjoy this healthful, colorful food at all times of the year. The tart taste of cranberries has the happy faculty of making us feel good—a cold spray from the ocean, or a quick dip before lunch.

Dietically speaking, cranberries have this invigorating effect upon our systems because they contain fuel value and a large percentage of water, such as we find in fruits. There is 83.9 per cent water in cranberries, which produces a cleansing effect on our bodies. Cranberries contain 4.9 per cent protein, 6 per cent fat, 9.9 per cent carbohydrates, and .4 per cent ash—a mineral bone-building substance.

The tart taste of cranberries is due to their acid properties, which have a neutralizing effect. They also act as a stimulant to appetite.

Thus it is well to use plenty of cranberries in our menus, not only in the form of delicious cranberry jelly and sauce, but also in desserts.

Steamed Cranberry Pudding is unusual and delicious—Cream one-half cup butter, add one cup sugar gradually, and three eggs well beaten. Mix and sift three and one-half cups flour and one and one-fourth tablespoons baking powder, and add alternately with one-half cup milk to first mixture. Stir in one large can of cranberry sauce, turn into the buttered mould, cover and steam three hours. Serve with cream, sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Gay Colors Mark New Resort Garb

Windows Bright With Southern Attire Indicate Brilliant Mode.

Black and white combinations are featured for southern wear, along with the bright hues of red, greys, greens, beige and pinks. These hues in crepe de chine, jerseys, kasha and cashmere, are among the outstanding things that mark the resort attire. Tucks and tiny folds, up and down, crosswise, and diagonally, trim many frocks of one material. Smocking is also used, especially on dresses of jersey cloth, which, because of its softness, is particularly adaptable to this type of trimming. Usually such smocking is done in contrasting color, giving a bit more chic to an otherwise dull-colored frock.

Shoes for daytime southern wear are to be found in combinations of black and white, or brown and white, ranging from pumps, to one and two straps and the sport oxfords. Evening shoes are elaborate beyond all precedent, cut away to the sole in many instances and fastened with jeweled ties. Materials for these are of crepe de chine combined with kid in colors of pink and gold, black satin and silver kid, black satin and gold kid with jeweled ties, and cornflower crepe de chine encrusted with silver kid.

Beside these are raffia pumps, beach sandals, and low heeled sports shoes in most marvelous cuts and combinations. Truly, the woman who gathers an outfit for resort wear, must look carefully to the item of shoes, for they are of such line and quality as to display her good taste or mark her as being just a lap behind the last word in smart gowning.

For those who must face the chill winds of winter are no less intriguing garments. Colors may fall a little short in brilliance, but in cut and materials there is no lack of variety.

Among the still popular outfits are the two-piece frock, and the ensemble of frock and coat. Furs are elaborate, and beautiful, and designed for every occasion. Could milady afford a wardrobe of these, she would have her rough and ready morning fur for the shopping trip a semi-formal coat for afternoon wear, and an evening wrap of ermine or sable, dyed in most exquisite tints.

In two-piece frocks designs are without number. The corded, or tucked effect is much employed for trimming where there is no color introduced, but in others bright bands and embroidery to give the touch demanded by the present vogue. Crepes, kashas, jerseys, in fact all the materials used in southern garb, are to be found in winter garments designed for colder climes. The main difference lies in hues which are a little more subdued.

Black Solves Problem in Matter of Economy

With an infinite variety in color to bewilder the woman when she goes shopping for a winter coat, black finds many advocates. Jenny advises it for economy's sake and because it settles the color question at the same stroke. Black fabric with a rough surface for winter wear should come first, according to this designer if the clothes allowance is limited. In this day of costumes in harmony, the cost of color runs up into real money. It is here that the black coat bridges the gulf between wearing one color and enjoying the variety of a varicolored wardrobe. Nearly any shade may be chosen to wear under the black coat and with matching or black accessories makes a limited sum go much farther.

Dark blue and brown are the two colors which must not be attempted with the black wrap. Another point to be observed in the selection of a black coat is that the lining must be of self color or the choice of colors for the frock is limited to those in harmony with the lining.

VIGILANTES HALT BANK ROBBERIES

Make Iowa Very Unpopular
Place for Hold-Up Men to Operate.

Council Bluffs, Iowa.—If Dave and Broy Harding, who held up and robbed the bank at Modale, Iowa, and shot two men in doing so, hadn't have been new ones in the bank robbing business they might have remembered the slogan of the Iowa vigilantes: "If you rob a bank in Iowa, you get caught." And if the Harding brothers had known this, they might be free and at work today instead of in jail awaiting an absolute certain trip to the Iowa penitentiary for life.

The bank robber who comes before an Iowa court has a hard time. Life imprisonment is the penalty for the man who holds up a bank in the daytime in Iowa and the courts inflict that maximum penalty without hesitation.

That penalty, together with the Iowa vigilantes and the pistols and rifles of the latter organization, have made bank robbing mighty unpopular in Iowa.

The Modale Bank Robbery.

Dave Harding, forty-four, a fisherman along the Missouri river, and his brother, Broy Harding, twenty-three,
a blacksmith, entered the Modale bank about ten o'clock one morning, shot the cashier, grabbed $4,500, ran out the door and were met by bullets from eight or ten men who got wind of the holdup. The brothers escaped to their automobile, shot another man, and got away.

Half an hour later they crossed the Missouri river on the ice, were given a "lift" by a passing automobile and reached Omaha. But when they went to enter the boarding house in Omaha where they had prepared to "lay up"
for awhile, they found four Omaha detectives, each with a riot gun and a lot of other weapons waiting for them.
That was some four or five hours after the holdup.

Everybody watches out when there has been a bank robbery in Iowa. The system of pursuit is all out and dried.
Practically every county has a vigilance committee. The members of the committee, and their telephone numbers, are right before every telephone operator in the small towns. And the operator who first gives notice of a bank robbery is paid $25 extra.

When a holdup has been perpetrated, these telephone operators not only call out the members of the local committees, but notify heads in adjoining counties, giving a description of the robbers wherever possible, the kind of automobile in which they are escaping and all other available information.

They give a "general" ring, calling all the farmers in the county and ask these farmers to keep a lookout and report any suspicious automobile parties.
They notify sheriffs and marshals and within a few minutes the entire country is out after the robbers.

$1,000 Reward Offered.

Automatically a reward of $1,000 for the robbers, "dead or alive," goes into effect the moment an Iowa bank robbery takes place. This is all arranged and is a standing reward in the state.

The speed with which the Harding brothers were captured is but an example of the way that the Iowa vigilance committee works, although in this case the capture was made by the Omaha police. Information as to where they would be found was telephoned from Iowa, however.

About a year ago Pat Carroll, Kansas bank robber, and his gang held up a bank at Little Sioux, Iowa. With every point covered, the bandits were making a run for Kansas but they never got out of Iowa. The vigilantes got them. Pat Carroll is now serving a life sentence in prison.

The vigilantes were organized by the Iowa bankers and every member is a man of good character and of responsibility. They are sworn in as officers but do not take the field except when major crimes have been committed. They draw no salaries but are eligible to the $1,000 rewards for bank robbers and for other rewards offered for criminals.

Dog Newspaper Is Published by Hindu

Baroda, India.—Having founded a city for dogs in which the canines are taught the errors of their carnivorous ways and are made to eat only vegetable food, Junia Sheth, an eccentric Hindu millionaire, now is bringing out a dog newspaper. The newspaper's policy is to eradicate the killing tendency in dogs.

The rations given the vegetarian canines were published for the first time in a recent issue.
Puppies are given an especially tasty dish called shira, made from wheat flour, fried in butter, and then slowly cooked in milk—with a dash of sugar and salt. The older dogs are given tougher bread and leathery pancakes.

To make the village safe from rats and mice which might tempt the dogs, all the floors have been constructed with cement.

INDIAN RED BUGS RICHLY ENDOWED

Wealthy Banker Leaves $100,- 000 for Rest Homes.

Allahabad, India.—One hundred thousand dollars for a home of rest for bugs (the irritating Indian red bug) is the strange legacy left by a Marwari banker millionaire named Sohi Baddhimal, who died recently in Sihori state, central India.

Sohi Baddhimal set aside a quarter of a million rupees (which is roughly $100,000 red money) for the building and maintenance of three resthouses in Sihori state, in each of which a special room is to be set aside for the preservation of red bugs.

The red bug is a well known Indian pest, encroaching everywhere in railroads, trolley cars, automobiles, houses, and, in fact, wherever human feet tread, the bug creeps in to disturb the peace and quiet of the evenings. The Sihori banker demanded that in the red bug rooms at his resthouses, poor travelers should be paid for the "service" of sleeping in them at the rate of roughly $1 per two hours.

There is of course a catch in this.
If at any time a poor unfortunate bug be found dead, through the unconscious squirming of the paid victim, or otherwise, the traveler loses his dollar.

There are at present some 250 "red bug rooms" in the resthouses of Rajputana state, but the occupants thereof are not paid for the privilege of their company. They are more or less "quarantined" for the benefit of the non-infested travelers who use the resthouses. But while it has been a long standing custom to provide "bug rooms" for resthouses, no such valuable legacy has been left for many years in this part of India, and certainly no such legacy which seemingly considers the feelings of the bugs.

London Fog Changes; Even Taste Altered!
London.—London's fog has lost its individuality and some of its taste. Time, or something, seems to have worn the edge clear off of it.
Dickens, who so delightfully described the London mist, would be disappointed were he to see one today. He would not recognize the modern fog any more than he would know the narrow streets which David Copperfield so often trod.
The same old streets wind about in the same old way, but many of them have been widened. This may have something to do with the changing fog, which is not so impenetrable as formerly, but the scientists disagree about the vapor's transformation and its causes.
At any rate, the wider streets are now more easily negotiated even when a fog is at its height. And the old-timers are quite positive that the fog of today tastes much different to that served in the days of Victoria.

ANCIENT TOMB NEAR ALGIERS AWES ARABS
Antedates Christianity by at Least Two Centuries.
Paris.—A mysterious tomb, regarded with awe by the lowly Arabs of the region, stands on the crest of a lofty hill, about fifty miles from Algiers. It is known as Le Tombeau de la Chretienne, the tomb of the Christian woman, although French scholars regard it, without proof, as a Punic structure antedating the Christian era by at least two centuries.
So little is actually known of this mausoleum that small wonder is occasioned by the fantastic legend handed down about it in truly Oriental style throughout the countryside. The Arabs themselves call it Khour Er-Roumia, which means European or Christian tombs, the use of the plural suggesting that they regarded it as a multiple tomb. Even their legend throws little light on the origin of the strange edifice.
The mystery that hangs about it is deepened by current Arab legends, which imply the fixed belief that much undiscovered treasure lies buried inside.
At the top of the hill which rises a thousand feet above the Mediterranean, this extraordinary relic of antiquity rears itself an additional 100 feet. The structure is a circular mass of dressed stone, at least 200 feet in diameter.
Sculptured Columns.
Sixty engaged columns, sculptured in relief and resembling the Ionic in style, decorate the lower circumference of the tambour, a drum-shaped edifice, originally surmounted by a lofty cone of rock. At the four cardinal points of the compass huge false portals are sculptured. A design on each of them, resembling a great cross, is responsible for the present French name of the ruin.
In an effort to discover the treasure two small tunnels were long ago dug through the center. On one side near the summit is a considerable depression made by Baba Mohammed Ben Othman, pasha of Algeria, in 1776, when he used cannon to demolish the tomb. The French government has now put a stop to the work of treasure hunters and other vandals, and some years ago restored one of the principal facades.
Entrance is possible through a low and very narrow passage which earlier excavations revealed in the substructure beneath one of the false portals, that facing the east. This entrance leads to a fairly spacious vaulted chamber whose solid stone masonry walls had apparently never borne decorations. But the right-hand wall has small relief sculptures of a lion and lioness.
Directly underneath these bas-reliefs another short, constricted passage, which has to be traversed on hands and knees, leads to seven ascending steps and then into a spacious and beautifully vaulted gallery built of large blocks of neatly dressed stone. This gallery, spiral in form, is more than 400 feet long. At the end a third passage leads first into a small chamber and then into a larger one. This was supposed, until recently, to be the exact center of the monument, but it is now known that it is somewhat off center, whether through accident or design has not been determined.

Place for Cinerary Urns.
The purpose of the chambers is also in doubt. Nothing has been found in them or in the spiral gallery. It may be supposed that the first was a vestibule to the second, in which three niches are sunk in the bare walls. It is a further guess that the niches were intended to hold cinerary urns. It is possible that these supposed mortuary chambers are blinds, like the four portals, and that the real vaults are deep in the foundations, approached by vertical shafts with horizontal passages at the bottom.
This manner of entombing the dead, filling up and disguising the shafts, after each interment, corresponds with the Phoenician and Punic practices of antiquity. If this supposition be true, the tomb still guards its secret, and the local Arabic tradition of the multiple tomb is not without meaning.
The builder, whoever he may have been, chose well the site of his last resting place. To the north, a thousand feet below, stretches the waters of the Mediterranean; to the south, long green slopes reach into the fruitful valley of the Mitidja. Along the southern horizon the cedar bearing Atlas mountains rear their purple wall, from which clear streams descend to make the valley prosperous.

Find Tree Stump in Process of Petrification
Bethany, Mo.—Workmen with a railroad construction crew from St. Joseph, working on the Burlington railroad right of way near this city, unearthed a red oak stump in the process of petrification. The stump, which measured about two and one-half feet through, is believed to have been buried in the fill for almost fifty years, or ever since the railroad was built. Its removal required four days. It showed no signs of decay and was so tough it could not be split with an ax.

Somerville, N. J.—Fifteen-year-old Doris Duke, probably the richest girl of her age in the world, is worth $33,451,069. It is shown in an accounting of the estate of her father, James Buchanan Duke, tobacco magnate.

The facility with which engineering concerns can estimate costs of constructing machinery and equipment is little short of amazing to the uninitiated, says the Wall Street Journal. If a call comes for a generator or turbine of unusual size the engineer quickly calculates the price to be charged as so many hundreds of thousands of dollars, or even millions. It is largely based on weight. The same process has been extended to other lines. After weighing their incoming mail over an extended period and studying the resultant records, big mail-order houses are now able to estimate exactly the aggregate value of the orders received each day by the simple process of weighing them. Tabulation of the individual orders has shown that these estimates differ from the actual by only a small percentage.

Academic Prize Went to Skillful Arguer
Heretofore "wrangling" was only another word for disputing, and as in the Middle ages all scholarship was decided by skill in argument in public, so the senior disputor or "wrangler" was the winner of any academic prize.
Long after this system of public argument had been superseded by the system of written examinations, the name of wrangler had survived, and up to only a few years ago was given at Cambridge to the senior mathematician of any one year, many of the famous scholars of the world being known as first, second and third "wranglers."
Some seventeen years ago, however, the order of senior, second, and so on, "wrangler" was abolished, mathematical scholars being now alphabetically arranged under groups.

AMUSEMENTS
"The Kid Brother" has been selected as the title of Harold Lloyd's new Paramount release which is scheduled for showing at the Met theater on Monday.
Lloyd's new opus, which has been in production for six months, is rated by those who have seen it as the comedian's finest endeavor to date. In gay sequences it's said to surpass anything that the star has done heretofore.
Jobyna Ralston is again Harold's leading woman and in his supporting cast are Walter James, Olin Francis, Leo Willis, Eddie Boland, Ralph Yearsley and Frank Lanning.
The locale of the story, which was written by Lloyd and his staff, is laid in the mountains and on ship board. While most of the action takes place in a hill-billy town, it is on board a ship that a terrible fight, reminiscent of the one in "Grandma's Boy" takes place.

HARTMAN THEATER.
Thurston, the magician, returns to the Hartman theater, Columbus, on next Monday evening, February 7, on his twenty-first annual tour for a week's engagement, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. He brings with him this season the most elaborate magical production he has ever offered to local theatergoers. For the first time in the history of magic the real East Indian rope trick will be presented on a fully lighted theater stage. The Hindu rope trick is the most talked of illusion in all magic. This is the first time it has ever been presented outside the guarded precincts of the Yogi sects of the Himalaya mountains in India.
Mr. Thurston has been for many years a student and investigator of Hindu magic. He has delved deep into the esoteric lore of that mysterious land. For several months he lived with a band of high class Yogi magicians in the fastnesses of the Himalayas, near Darjeeling, India, and it was while in that occult company that he conceived the idea of translating the famous rope trick from its native heath, so to say, to the theater stage. For more than a decade he has worked and experimented on this illusion and it was only a few short weeks ago that his dream was realized and the seeming miracle perfected for presentation before the public. And now for the first time Columbus audiences will see a native Hindu boy actually climbing a rope on a brilliantly lighted theater stage. A rope tossed into the air by a swarthy, turbaned Yogi. A rope hanging in mid air like Mohamet's casket at Mecca. Up, up the boy will climb. As he nears the top, while yet in full view of all the spectators in the Hartman, and while the beams of spotlights are playing all about him, he will vanish.

In addition to the "Rope Trick" this season's program is complete with an abundance of new mysteries. Thurston claims that it is the best and most entertaining program that he has ever presented. Among the many illusions are "Buried Alive," an Oriental mystery, "Broadcasting a Woman," "The Vanishing Horse and Rider," "The Human Cannon Ball," "Crushing a Woman," "The Great Hindu Basket Trick," "The Vanishing Donkey," "The Elastic Lady," "The Mystic Follies" and "The Phantom Princess" who floats out over the stage into the orchestra, then vanishing like a cloud in thin air. In all there are one hundred baffling mysteries. Thurston's company consists of thirty-five people, including many beautiful girls, and three 60 ft. baggage cars are needed to transport the equipment.

CLOTURE TO BE USED WHEN
BILL COMES UP

Washington, Feb. 3.—The Cloture rule, used only a few times in senate history, was resurrected by the farm and banking blocs coalition today to end the legislative jam in the upper house.

Cloture petitions were circulated and will be presented as soon as sufficient names are obtained so debate on the McNary-Haugen farm price stabilization bill and the Pepper-MacFadden banking bill may be drastically limited.

This action came after Vice President Dawes, acting as peace-maker had induced the two blocs to drop their differences over precedence and to work in unison again.

Wedding Tears

At last it has been determined why a girl cries at a wedding. It's because she wants the groom for her husband, she's glad she didn't get him, she's delighted that the bride got him, she's sorry for her sake that she did, or her shoes hurt.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HELD HIS HONOR
ABOVE LIBERTYMan Who Went to Prison
Rather Than Confess
Falsely Is Freed.

Little Rock, Ark.—Lester E. A. Yeager, Arkansas convict who attracted national attention because he put honor before freedom, spent the holidays at his home at Helena, Ark., a free man.

Yeager was pardoned by Governor Terral, the second complete pardon the governor has granted during his two years in office. The first was given to an aged prisoner an hour before he died.

Yeager, five years ago, rejected advice of his lawyers to plead guilty of a statutory charge brought by a fifteen-year-old girl and thereby get off with one-year sentence. He said he was innocent and refused to perjure himself, although it was apparent he would receive a long sentence if tried and convicted.

Yeager, a former deputy sheriff of Phillips county, became involved in a difficulty with W. P. Mansfield, and the latter was killed. Yeager was acquitted on the ground of self defense. Six or eight months later a young daughter of Mansfield's widow accused Yeager as the father of her child. A year later she swore she had testified falsely and sought to have Yeager released.

21-Year Sentence.

Yeager was sentenced in 1921 to 21 years in the penitentiary. From that time on his case has been more or less in the public eye. Former Gov. T. C. McRae ran advertisements in Helena papers the day before the primary election in 1922 to refute last minute reports that he had promised to pardon Yeager. This incident served to block all hope of clemency from McRae.

Terral was nominated out of a field of six candidates in 1924 in a campaign in which issues were somewhat complicated. After Terral won the Democratic nomination, which amounts to election, he chose to believe he had been nominated on a no-pardon no-parole policy. Early in his administration Terral said he would grant pardons if the trial judge, prosecuting attorney and all members of the jury said they believed they had made a mistake and convicted an innocent man.

Friends of Yeager took him at his word. The judge, prosecuting attorney and eleven of twelve jurors signed a petition for Yeager's pardon. The governor stuck to his proposition literally and declined to do more than grant Yeager a 30-day furlough. This was renewed once, but at its expiration Yeager returned to the penitentiary.

National Publicity.

It began to look as though the third executive, Gov. Elect John E. Martineau, would have to face the Yeager dilemma, but at this point publicity beyond the bounds of Arkansas took a hand in the case. Early in November the matter was given wide publicity.

Soon the governor's foreign mail began to increase. So did Yeager's. Hardly a day passed that the governor did not get letters from residents of distant states begging him to pardon Yeager. A Hayden of Brooklyn went so far as to circulate a petition there with the intention of sending it to the Arkansas governor. It is said he obtained more than 100 names. He also wrote Gov. Al Smith, asking that official to use his influence with the Arkansas governor to obtain a pardon.

Governor Terral confided to newspaper men several weeks ago that he would give Yeager a pardon. Yeager, however, knew nothing of the contemplated action until he returned to the penitentiary from his daily labor and found the precious document. He bade his friends goodby and left the institution immediately.

Yeager had received presents from several states, some of them being sent from poor people. One box contained several striped handkerchiefs. "You know," Yeager said, "I appreciate these presents, even the handkerchiefs, but I've formed such a dislike for stripes during the last five years that I had to give them away."

Machine Induces Slumber

Dr. Hans Salomon, of Berlin, has patented a "slumber machine," an apparatus which produces a humming sound like that of a hive of bees. When wound up it runs from 40 to 45 minutes, gradually becoming slower and softer. Doctors have confirmed the satisfactory results obtained in insomnia cases.

Being Well Shod More

Important Than Ever

Being well shod has become one of the important items to the well-groomed woman. Today the shoe takes second place to no other part of the wardrobe, but must be given as much attention in itself and in its relation to the ensemble as the frock or hat.

Every woman knows that shoes are the most difficult articles to select. They are not as interesting as hats and gowns, yet they play an all-important role in the smart woman's wardrobe. They must be comfortable first, look good on the foot and also carry out the costume idea by matching or blending with the color or detail of the costume.

Gertrude Olmsted, the motion-picture actress, one of the best-shod women in the world, gives some valuable tips on being well shod. Here are some "dos and don'ts" from the well-known player.

"Don't allow the heels to overbalance you. When you try on a pair of slippers be sure that the heels do not throw you too far forward or too far backward.

"If you want your ankles to look slim be sure that the vamps of your shoes are long and slender and that bows or buckles do not break the line from toe to ankle.

"If your foot is short and broad avoid elaborate slippers. Plain black or white or beige pumps are much more becoming to this type of foot than the many-strapped slipper.

"Flat heels for sports wear, Cuban heels for the street, extremely high French heels for evening! I want to make that emphatic, a few women realize how important this is. A French heel can ruin the smartest sports outfit.

"When you buy shoes that are too small for your feet remember that you fool no one but yourself. Comfort is the big consideration. Comfort improves not only the line of the foot, but the disposition as well. Too much foot for the shoe detracts from the most effective costume."

Many Accessories That

Are Admired by Women

Brilliant buckles on belts, heels made entirely of rhinestones, and flowers fashioned of rubber are only a few of the new developments which make the mode so interesting and so different from the fashions of yesterday. The buckle, strange as it may seem, often is attached to a belt of beige suede for the frock of kasha in the soft neutral tone that is the height of smartness. Rubber flowers come in many colors and are intended for wear on fur coats.

The place of shoes in the mode never has been so important. One's footwear should not only be in harmony with the costume, but also suitable to the occasion. Shoes for morning, afternoon and evening are distinct types. A splendid shoe for walking or for the country is of brown calf with heavy perforated bands and a buckle placed at the side of the single wide strap. For afternoon, satin in a new tone of bronze, overcast with a grayish tinge, is well liked. For evening, black moire with a heel made of brilliants is chosen to complete the black and white vogue.

Knitted Sports Suits Popular

At this time of year, the knitted sports garments come into their own. Most of them have skirts of misty gray or green over which are worn jumpers of the brightest patterns. The Highland plaids are utilized for some of these. Fancy hosiery and silk stockings with colored figures of blue or green shades are used.

OUT OF ORDER SURE

Ethel—Why are you so sure the scales must be out of order, dear?

May—Why, they have me weighing five pounds more than the last time!

Easy Money

"If I had your head," a fan cried out, To the dumb-bell Casey Jones; 'T'd break it in a thousand bits, And make a thousand bones."

Up-to-Date

"There!" said the man who had silenced his opponent, "I guess that took the wind out of his sails."

"Be modern," returned his companion. "You mean you let the wind out of his tires."

CARD PARTY

The fourth of a series of entertainments planned by the Pickaway County Chapter of the American Red Cross for the patients at Veterans' Hospital No. 97, at Camp Sherman, was held yesterday afternoon.

The hostesses for this occasion were, Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Mrs. T. F. Jeffries, Mrs. Bert Lyle, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. Mary G. Morris, Mrs. Irma Gehres, Miss Flora Palm, Miss Martha Crist, Miss Madeline Trump, Miss Agnes Butch. Cards were the diversion of the afternoon and at the conclusion of the games refreshments of cake, candy and cigarettes were served. It is needless to say that the inmates of this hospital were very grateful for the diversion. The next entertainment planned will be a musical under the direction of Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, the date of which has not been definitely announced.

STEVENSON'S

BAR PUBLIC FROM REMUS HEARING

Cincinnati, Feb. 3.—A mother's love spoke in defense of her boy in his hour of need when Mrs. Marie Remus, mother of George Remus, Cincinnati bootleg king, testified before Thomas Thomas, U. S. immigration director, in an effort to save him from being deported. Although she is 77 years old, Mrs. Remus willingly made the trip from Chicago to testify. She said "George was always a fine boy" in reviewing his life.

The hearing was held behind closed doors and the public, including newspaper men, was excluded.

The government contends that Remus was over the legal age—21 years—when his father, Frank Remus, was naturalized in the Cook county court, Chicago, on March 24, 1899, and therefore did not inherit his father's citizenship. It further contends that his violation of the prohibition act made him guilty of moral turpitude and an undesirable alien.

GRASSHOPPERS, ONCE PEST, NOW MISSED IN WYOMING

Cowboy State Now Ready to Declare Truce With Ancient Enemy and Welcome Them Back.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Wyoming wants more grasshoppers. The cowboy state is ready not only to declare a truce with its ancient enemy, but to bid the pest welcome home to the Big Horn basin.

In the Wyoming of antiquity the hoppers flew in clouds thick enough to obscure the sun. Five years ago the basin had plenty. The plague did its annual damage to farm crops. Turkeys were introduced to combat the insects, and did so successfully. They routed the hoppers from the farm land and pursued the depleted insect army to mountain terrain.

Now a severe decline threatens the grasshopper crop and lamentations are being heard from the ranchmen, who, in the meantime have discovered that they can reap enormous profits from turkeys, grown half wild on the grasshopper range in the mountain foothills. The turkey growing industry has increased by leaps and bounds; grasshoppers have accordingly declined. Grasshopper preserves for the propagation of turkey food are a possibility of the future.

Big Horn basin turkeys, excelling others because the climate and food conditions found in the basin make it a natural paradise for turkeys, already are famous all over the United States for their superiority. They are sought eagerly by dealers, who pay exceptional prices to the growers, 41 cents a pound being the 1925 rate. Big Horn basin ranchmen can grow rich on turkeys if only they can produce enough fowls. An unlimited number of fowls can be produced if only the grasshopper range bears up. As matters are, production cost is one-third, or less, of the selling price. And turkeys prefer grasshoppers.

Feed Beef for Spring Market

Plan Is Favored Because of Low Price of Cottonseed Meal and Hulls.

Because of the low price of cottonseed meal and hulls this winter, winter feeding of beef cattle for the spring market might be a good venture for farmers who are favorably located for the work.

Favorable Fattening Dates.
"The most favorable dates for fattening beef cattle are between November 1 and March 1," says Prof. R. S. Curtis, animal husbandman at the North Carolina State college. "Cattle do better in the winter months and there is not so much danger in feeding the meal. Those who wish to begin this work should do so at once, otherwise the finishing period may extend over into the warm months. Conditions then are less favorable for feeding cottonseed meal, farmers are busy in spring and the manure must be hauled out at an unfavorable time."

Professor Curtis states that when one starts to feed beef cattle with the meal, each animal should be given one pound daily and the amount be gradually increased so that a full ration be given at the end of 30 days. A safe rule to follow for the full ration is one pound of meal to each 100 pounds live weight of animal, using 2 1/2 to 3 pounds of hulls for each pound of cottonseed meal used. Where farm roughages are available the hulls should be decreased. It requires from 90 to 120 days to put a decent finish on beef cattle. Rations should be given them twice daily and water and salt kept before them at all times.

Gain of Beef Animal.
A beef animal should gain from 160 to 200 pounds during a feeding period of 120 days and under average conditions there should be a margin of two cents per pound between the buying and selling price. Most feeders figure that if they can break even and have the manure clear with 80 to 85 per cent of the fertilizing constituents of the meal in it, they have done a good piece of work. The finished animals are usually marketed during the early spring.

Calf Feeds Necessary to Make Rapid Growth

If a calf eight weeks old is to make rapid growth it will be necessary to feed it some milk with grain and hay. If it is impossible to feed it milk it will make a fairly good growth on the following mixture: Shelled corn, 30 pounds; oats, 30 pounds; wheat bran 30 pounds, and linseed meal, 30 pounds. Mix and let the calf have all it will clean up without waste. The oats and corn may also be ground if desired. The calf should have all the bright clover hay it will eat and also all the water it will drink. Alfalfa hay can be fed instead of the clover hay, but it is not so good for young calves as is clover hay, since it is much richer in protein, which in some cases, does not agree with the calf. The calf should have a clean box stall and have plenty of sunlight.

Feed Adult Geese for Eggs Along in February

Adult geese should be fed for eggs about February 1, or so that the goslings will be hatched by the time there is good grass pasture. In feeding for eggs give a mash of equal parts by weight of corn meal, bran, and middlings or low-grade flour with 10 per cent of beef scrap, in the morning, and a feed of corn at night. A constant supply of drinking water should be provided. If geese need grain when not laying, the beef scrap should be left out and the corn meal increased in this ration to three parts.

Cull Out Poor Sows

It will not pay to carry sows through the winter if they are not satisfactory pig raisers. Sows that for any reason are not raising good litters should be fattened and sent to market. Old sows that are past the age of greatest usefulness should be replaced in the breeding herd by good gilts. Blindness, bad udders and sluggish disposition are frequently found with old sows. A sluggish, lazy sow is more apt to injure or kill her pigs.

FARM NOTES

One way to save labor is to put it on the best land.

To keep the loafer hens from eating up the profits why not eat up the loafer hens?

The term unit as applied to fertilizers means 1 per cent or 20 pounds in a ton.

A farm inventory is the first step in keeping farm accounts. On the average farm it requires about one-half a day to take it.

Many dairymen consider buckwheat middlings equal to gluten feed for milk production. They have about the same total feed value as wheat bran.

The comparatively high prices that have been paid for summer milk for the past few years have had a tendency to make a shortage of winter milk now.

HENRY T. CHITTENDEN

Made Defendant In Divorce Suit Filed In New York City.

Henry Treat Chittenden, a member of a pioneer Columbus family, has been sued for divorce in the courts of New York City by Vannessi Jardiniere, a dancer who was featured three years ago in "Innocent Eyes," a New York production, according to advices from that city.

In this petition, Chittenden, who was associated with the law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft at the time of his marriage, and is now said to be connected with the banking offices of Hayden, Stone & Co., is accused of certain indiscretions in an apartment within a few blocks of his own home, 186 East 67th street.

Chittenden is the son of Henry T. Chittenden, after whom the Chittenden hotel of Columbus was named. He was the grandson by marriage of the late E. T. Mithoff, who during his life was the largest owner of real estate in Columbus. His mother was Henrietta Bassell, daughter of John V. Bassell, for many years secretary of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. After her separation from the elder Chittenden she married Police Commissioner Bugher, of New York, from whom she inherited nearly a million dollars.

The marriage of Chittenden took place Jan. 1, 1924, at Taunton, Mass., but was not announced until four months later after he and his bride had spent their honeymoon in Bermuda. Chittenden at that time was in the diplomatic service of the federal government. The late Countess Pucelli and Campbell M. Chittenden were his half sister and brother.

Something to Hope For

One member of a fishing party was an Irishman who disagreed very badly with the sea.

"True," moaned the sufferer, "but it's only the hope of dying keeps me alive."—Graphic.

Old Musical Instrument

The Jewish shophar, a ram's horn usually straightened and flattened, is the only ancient musical instrument actually preserved in the Moslem ritual and the oldest wind instrument known to be retained in present use in the world. It is still sounded by the Jews on the New Year and on the Day of Atonement. It is first named in the Bible as sounding when the Lord descended upon Mount Sinai.

Care of Evergreens

Dead wood should be removed from evergreens whenever discovered. Other pruning should be done as new growth is starting. Many evergreens do not start growth from old wood, so the pruning should not be severe enough to remove all the growing shoots from any branch.

Opals and Diamonds

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

WHEN the first baby arrived in the Oliver household, Fred Onslow found himself a god-father and Sylvia in the unique position of god-mother. Fred had known Sylvia since the day she was a leggy child with stubby pigtailed tied with flaming scarlet bows.

Sylvia was eighteen now and Fred twenty-three.

"It's such a pity you two don't fall in love with each other," the Olivers said frankly.

Sylvia and Fred laughed good naturedly.

"I am going to see the world," Fred informed them.

"And I want a career," stated Sylvia. "And besides Fred and I know each other far too well to fall in love."

"You're right," agreed the unflattering Fred, "and now, by way of changing the subject, I want to tell you that on each birthday my god-child has she is going to receive an opal. Thus when she's ten there will be ten stones and by the time she is twenty she can have a nice set of jewelry made."

"And I," promised Sylvia, "will give my god-child a diamond—not a big one—just a tiny one and they can be used with the opals when she is twenty."

"You're both too good," exclaimed Mrs. Oliver. "But it's a sweet idea."

So after the christening ceremony Sylvia and Fred went their separate ways. Fred, in the course of a year or two found himself in Australia and each year an opal, growing with the years, in beauty and size, was added to baby Oliver's collection. Fred was evidently making his way successfully through the world.

Sylvia went in for writing poetry and made very, very slow progress. She became engaged to a waster who when they married brought her nothing but unhappiness. She continued to send the god-child a diamond but each year the stone became smaller.

The Olivers watched the affair with keen interest still wishing with all their hearts that their two dearest of friends had married early.

When baby was eight years old, a finer diamond than the previous one arrived. The Olivers did not know, however, since Sylvia lived half-way across the continent from them, that it was one of the stones from Sylvia's engagement ring. There were five.

"They will tide me over another four years," Sylvia told herself cheerfully. Her husband had gone through every penny of her money but Sylvia was keeping up a brave front. Her discipline through marriage was harder than the Olivers suspected.

Often Sylvia heard of Fred and always she was told of the opal that arrived at the same time as the diamond. Baby was getting a most lovely collection of her birth stones.

"When she is fifteen," wrote Mrs. Oliver, "I do so wish you could come on for a visit and we will talk of having some of the stones set. I should love your advice."

Sylvia sighed as she read the letter and looked down at her shabby clothes. Her poetry was selling a bit but not so well as it might. Anyway it helped a little. She realized that she could do far better by herself and longed for the freedom of before-marriage days. Naturally she fell to wondering how marriage with Fred would have developed her. Certainly it could not have been so hard a school as the one she had gone through.

Another year passed and with it went the second diamond from the ring. With that year, too, went Sylvia's husband. She wasn't sorry and she turned a braver face to a lonely world and wrote far better poetry.

"We are wishing you could come on this year," wrote Mrs. Oliver. "Alice will be fourteen and she does so want some of her lovely stones set into a pendant. I think she could have one, don't you?"

"I believe I can manage," wrote back Sylvia.

The separation of ten years was bridged instantly with the entwining arms of real friendship. Sylvia wept copiously on her friend's shoulder, and when she raised her head it seemed as if the whole fifteen years had fallen from their lives. The day of the christening ceremony seemed but yesterday.

They were chatting like magpies when a great clanging of the bell startled them. A second later, Fred Onslow, big and bronzed, was announced.

Sylvia shrank back into the shadow.

"What a glorious surprise," Mrs. Oliver panted quite overcome with joy.

"I wanted to bring Alice her opal myself this time," laughed Fred.

A second later he and Sylvia were clasping hands and their eyes clung together with curious intensity.

Mrs. Oliver went softly from the room to interview the cook.

And after dinner, in which a little of sadness, a little of madness and a great deal of gladness entered in, Mrs. Oliver smiled wisely. And in her silent glance Oliver read her thoughts.

"I know it now," he admitted with a look full of everything that is beautiful toward Sylvia, "but we're going to have a big try at making up for fifteen years that we've lost."

And little Alice looked about and wondered why everyone looked so happy just because it was her birthday.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

PARIS MAKES ROOM FOR LEGIONNAIRES

Splendid co-operation of the French government officials has made it possible to complete practically all arrangements for the ninth annual convention of the American Legion to be held in Paris next September. Albert Greenlaw, Augusta, Maine, resident member of the France convention committee, in the French capital, reported upon his arrival recently at national headquarters of the Legion in Indianapolis, Ind.

Use of the Trocadero, famous exhibition building in Paris, for the business sessions of the 1927 convention has been authorized by the French government and the Hotel Palais d'Orsay, one of the finest in Europe, has been obtained for the headquarters of "46 and 8," the play society of the Legion. A goal of 2,000 rooms has been reached and every American Legionnaire going abroad for the convention is assured a clean, comfortable room at a price from $10 to $15 per person for the convention.

week. Eventually 30,000 rooms will be inspected and set aside for the Legionnaires, the France convention committee member reported after his stay in Paris.

Arrangements have been completed for Paris to close shop and observe the day of the big American Legion parade through the streets of the French capital next September as a holiday. The parade of the American and French veterans of the World war will be staged on September 20. The parade will be officially sponsored by the highest military and civilian authorities. Marshal Foch, supreme commander of the allied forces, and General Gouraud, military governor of Paris, have expressed their willingness to assist. Gen. John J. Pershing, wartime commander of the A. E. F., and Howard P. Savage, national commander of the Legion, have made reservations for the France trip and will be in the reviewing stand.

"With reservations coming into national headquarters in a steady stream and a definite quota assigned to each state in the movement, there will be many Legionnaires bitterly disappointed by not being able to obtain a place in the Paris movement unless they get their reservation in at the earliest possible moment," Bowman Elder, Indianapolis, national chairman of the France convention committee, advises. A department France convention officer has been appointed in each state to represent the Legion in helping veterans make their applications for reservation. All applications must come through the department France convention officer.

Great Fleet Will Carry Legionnaires to Paris

The fleet of 28 great ocean liners that will carry members of the Legion to Paris for their convention will be led by the Leviathan, flagship of the movement and the greatest steamship afloat. The Leviathan has an interesting war record. She was the Vaterland, pride of the German nation, prior to the war. She was seized by the United States government and christened the Leviathan after being outfitted as a troop transport. The Leviathan carried nearly 40,000 men to France and return, sometimes taking as many as 10,000 on a trip.

Welfare Division Called Upon to Help Children

The number of children of dead or disabled war veterans referred to the American Legion's National Child Welfare Division in Indianapolis, Ind., for aid per month has increased more than 400 per cent in the last year, James F. Barton, national adjutant of the Legion, announced recently.

In December, 1925, aid was asked for 23 children. In January, 1926, 44 appeals reached national headquarters. The number rose to 53 in April; 80 in August; 89 in November, and passed the hundred mark in December.

JOHN COMES OUT.

"Jolly" John Strous of Tarlton reached his seventy-first birthday anniversary on Wednesday, February 2, (ground hog day).

John did not intend to show himself up town, on Wednesday, but Earl Defenbaugh promised him a quarter if he would come up town and let the boys see him—now John physically is as good a man and better morally than Earl so he just put on his best "Sunday-go-meeting" clothes, and went right up town, but that sly old Earl didn't have the quarter—he said his wife refused to allow him with that much money about his clothing, for fear he would happen to come to Laurelville and have it taken from him.

But John spent the day mingling with his friends who are pleased that Johnny can enjoy a little joke as well as the other fellow.

John says next winter, he is going down in Florida where George Mowery stays during the winter, and eat oranges while Earl Defenbaugh stays up north and freezes his darn fool self to death.—The Border News.

Holy Oil

The holy anointing oil referred to in the Bible had a base of olive oil and was scented with flowery myrrh, sweet cinnamon, sweet calamus and cassia. These ingredients were probably mixed with the oil in powder form, the mixture then heated until the oil absorbed the odors and allowed to stand until the insoluble matter settled and the oil could be decanted.

OHIO FARMERS CROWNED WITH LAURELS

TWO SONS OF OLD PICKAWAY AWARDED HONORS AND MEDALS

Masters of Corn, Wheat, Potatoes and Pork Yields are Awarded Prizes By Dean Alfred Vivian—Bruce Stevenson in 300 Bushel Potato Class; Homer Cromley, of Ashville, in the Hundred Bushel Corn Club Val Valentine, of Stoutsville, and Dressbach & Anderson and L. F. Bower, of Kingston, in the Ton Litter Class.

Medals may be worn in peacetime as in war. This was demonstrated Friday when 73 Ohio farmers were given medals and made members of Ohio's honor clubs for masters of corn, wheat, potato and pork production by Dean Alfred Vivian of the college of agriculture, Ohio State university.

On this tenth anniversary of the 100-Bushel Corn club of Ohio nine farmers were admitted to membership because they had grown this past season 100 or more bushels of corn an acre on 10 acres. This club now has a membership of 100 men, living in 37 Ohio counties.

Members of 100-Bushel Corn club who were honored are Edgar Bixle, Bluffton; Jenaro Wolfe, Sabina; Orville Beane, Arcanum; John C. Cannon, Washington C. H.; Ira C. Marshall; Dola; Glenn Marshall, Dola; Ward Marshall, Brookville; Howard Eby, Trotwood, and Homer Cromley, Ashville.

The 40-Bushel Wheat club, now in its third year, added 20 names to the roster, making a total of 28 men in the club. To qualify a man must grow 40 bushels of wheat an acre on 10 acres.

New members are Urban H. Troeger, Defiance; Clark A. Given, Galion; Clarence Cash, Metamora; W. G. Pfaff Swanton; Walter D. Feller, Mt. Blanchard; F. Harold Wells, Croton; James Iler, Utica; H. J. Longnecker, Whitehouse; D. A. Lathrop & Sons, Berkey; Irvin Blaystone, Berkey; Matt Irmen East Toledo; Clarence L. Slack, Trintwan; Clark H. Cunningham, Oakwood; H. H. Casselman, Old Fort; C. L. Earl Old Fort; D. W. Galehouse, Marshallville; H. J. Newcomer, Bryan; W. C. Weigle, Montpelier; Paul Smith, W. Unity and L. O. Crook, Bryan.

The 300-Bushel Potato club, in its second year, added nine men to membership, making a total of 12 members. Membership in this club is obtained by growing 300 bushels of potatoes an acre on two acres.

Additions to the club are W. A. Shillito, Andover; Thompson Brothers Burton; Isaac C. Widdle, Casstown; E. M. Wissinger, West Milton; George B. Stevenson, Circleville; Stephen Bockler, Republic, and W. B. McKien, Greenspring.

Thirty-five Ohio farmers this past season qualified for the Ohio Ton-Litter club by producing a ton of pork in 180 days from one litter of pigs. This club, in its fourth year, now has 112 members. William C. Taylor of Butler county won a special medal for having raised a ton-litter for the fourth consecutive year.

New members of this organization are Copeland Brothers, Wapakoneta; Martin Katter, Wapakoneta; R. C. Stewart, St. Marys; William C. Taylor, Collinsville; M. C. Sanor, East Rochester; J. W. Shiefer, Bucyrus; Calvin Tracht, Galion; F. S. Applegate, Hicksville; Walter Derge, Defiance; R. Richardson, Farmer; Howard Cole, Ashley; E. E. Echelberger, Washington C. H.; J. A. Purtell & Son, Leesburg; Val Valentine, Stoutsville; Charles Behem Jackson; R. O. Wren, Lewiston; R. C. Lamb, Washingtonville; J. R. Manchester, Berlin Center; Eldridge Hawn Troy; R. H. Rymers, Elmore; Urgan Wagner, Oak Harbor; Oscar Anspach Thornville; L. M. Poorman, Glenford; E. H. Rambo, Roseville; Dressbach & Anderson, Kingston; G. N. Lockbaum Waverly; George Rea, Idaho.

E. J. Hathaway, Columbus Grove; H. H. Wolf, Shelby; L. F. Bower, Kingston; C. W. Edgington, Lyndon; Charles Weaver, Haverhill; R. Renninger, Tiffin; Carlyle Walter, Bascom and F. G. Davidson, Sidney.

Men who won membership in these clubs did so by doubling and in many cases trebling the state's average yield per acre or per unit.

The emphasis in these clubs, college officials explain it not on greater total production, but on greater production per acre or per unit of live stock, thereby making it possible to grow more on less land than formerly.

RESTAURANT BURGLARIZED.

The restaurant of Denny Pickens was entered Friday evening. The burglar effected an entrance thru a side window. As soon as the marauder got inside he turned off the gas light and then ransacked the place. Some cigars and a chewing gum machine were taken. The machine had not been emptied for a week and how much money it contained is unknown. Mr. Pickens thinks the machine contained between $8 and $10.

BURGLARS CALL AGAIN.

The National 5 & 10c store seems to be quite a favorite site for night marauders. The place was broken into again Friday evening for the second time in one week. Tuesday night Mr. Closson was relieved of about $9, change, money left in nine different registers. The burglar did the same act Friday night, entering the store and again rifled the registers of their contents. The store was entered in the rear by smashing a window.

ATLANTA CLUB PARTY BRINGS INDICTMENTS

Hotel Faces Liquor Charge
After Occasion Where the Bathtub Scene Depicted.

Violation of the prohibition law was charged to the Dinker Hotels Corporation, owners of the Ansley Hotel, Atlanta, Georgia, and M. B. Petty, house detective, by the Fulton county grand jury after a three-day investigation of the Atlanta Co-operative club party, held January 17, in honor of Carl H. Landneche, of Kansas City, international president.

Separate indictments also were returned against E. R. Thomas and Matthew Canders, negroes, charging them with serving whisky at the party and with perjury. They were waiters on duty at the Ansley hotel on the occasion when a bathtub scene, when a small negro girl as a principal character, climaxed the entertainment program.

The perjury indictment against the waiters charges that they testified during the examination that they did not see, serve nor smell any intoxicating liquor at the banquet.

Big Judgment.

The condemnation proceedings instituted by the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company against the Mid-West Box company, a subsidiary of The Container Corporation of America which has held the attention of Judge Adkins and a jury in the probate court for the past four days, was finally ended Friday, when the jury gave judgment against the railroad company for the sum of $133,000. Of this amount $125,000 was allowed for damages and $8,000 for 3.45 acres of land that the company will use as right-of-way thru the grounds of the Mid-West plant.

The Mid-West company asked for $328,000. Of this amount $280,000 was for damages and $48,000 for land.

General Manager Charles E. Raney of the Container corporation, together with A. C. Moore, manager of The Mid-West Box company, were interviewed shortly after the judgment was given and both claimed that the amount of the judgment is not in keeping with expense of building sheds over the straw ricks. The company officials estimate that it will cost in the neighborhood of $280,000 alone to build sheds. It is thought that the company will decide in a few days, whether to accept the judgment or take an appeal to a higher court.

The judgment given by the jury Friday to the Mid-West is the largest given so far in condemnation proceedings against the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company. It is understood that the railroad company made a settlement Friday with James I. Smith, paying him $16,750 to go thru his farm appropriating 4¼ acres of land. According to this settlement this leaves but one suit on the docket that of the Esmeralda Canning company which comes up next Tuesday in the probate court before a jury.

Fred C. Rector, of the firm of Wilson & Rector, of Columbus, and Charles H. May, of this city, represented the Chesapeake & Hocking Railroad company and Lewis C. Fauber, of Elyria and Irvin F. Snyder, of this city are the attorneys for the Mid-West Box company.

CLOTURE TO BE USED WHEN
BILL COMES UP

Washington, Feb. 3.—The Cloture rule, used only a few times in senate history, was resurrected by the farm and banking blocs coalition today to end the legislative jam in the upper house.

Cloture petitions were circulated and will be presented as soon as sufficient names are obtained so debate on the McNary-Haugen farm price stabilization bill and the Pepper-MacFadden banking bill may be drastically limited.

This action came after Vice President Dawes, acting as peace-maker had induced the two blocs to drop their differences over precedence and to work in unison again.

Wedding Tears

At last it has been determined why a girl cries at a wedding. It's because she wants the groom for her husband, she's glad she didn't get him, she's delighted that the bride got him, she's sorry for her sake that she did, or her shoes hurt.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HELD HIS HONOR
ABOVE LIBERTYMan Who Went to Prison
Rather Than Confess
Falsely Is Freed.

Little Rock, Ark.—Lester E. A. Yeager, Arkansas convict who attracted national attention because he put honor before freedom, spent the holidays at his home at Helena, Ark., a free man.

Yeager was pardoned by Governor Terral, the second complete pardon the governor has granted during his two years in office. The first was given to an aged prisoner an hour before he died.

Yeager, five years ago, rejected advice of his lawyers to plead guilty of a statutory charge brought by a fifteen-year-old girl and thereby get off with one-year sentence. He said he was innocent and refused to perjure himself, although it was apparent he would receive a long sentence if tried and convicted.

Yeager, a former deputy sheriff of Phillips county, became involved in a difficulty with W. P. Mansfield, and the latter was killed. Yeager was acquitted on the ground of self defense. Six or eight months later a young daughter of Mansfield's widow accused Yeager as the father of her child. A year later she swore she had testified falsely and sought to have Yeager released.

21-Year Sentence.

Yeager was sentenced in 1921 to 21 years in the penitentiary. From that time on his case has been more or less in the public eye. Former Gov. T. C. McRae ran advertisements in Helena papers the day before the primary election in 1922 to refute last minute reports that he had promised to pardon Yeager. This incident served to block all hope of clemency from McRae.

Terral was nominated out of a field of six candidates in 1924 in a campaign in which issues were somewhat complicated. After Terral won the Democratic nomination, which amounts to election, he chose to believe he had been nominated on a no-pardon no-parole policy. Early in his administration Terral said he would grant pardons if the trial judge, prosecuting attorney and all members of the jury said they believed they had made a mistake and convicted an innocent man.

Friends of Yeager took him at his word. The judge, prosecuting attorney and eleven of twelve jurors signed a petition for Yeager's pardon. The governor stuck to his proposition literally and declined to do more than grant Yeager a 30-day furlough. This was renewed once, but at its expiration Yeager returned to the penitentiary.

National Publicity.

It began to look as though the third executive, Gov.-Elect John E. Martineau, would have to face the Yeager dilemma, but at this point publicity beyond the bounds of Arkansas took a hand in the case. Early in November the matter was given wide publicity.

Soon the governor's foreign mail began to increase. So did Yeager's. Hardly a day passed that the governor did not get letters from residents of distant states begging him to pardon Yeager. A. Hayden of Brooklyn went so far as to circulate a petition there with the intention of sending it to the Arkansas governor. It is said he obtained more than 100 names. He also wrote Gov. Al Smith, asking that official to use his influence with the Arkansas governor to obtain a pardon.

Governor Terral confided to newspaper men several weeks ago that he would give Yeager a pardon. Yeager, however, knew nothing of the contemplated action until he returned to the penitentiary from his daily labor and found the precious document. He bade his friends goodbye and left the institution immediately.

Yeager had received presents from several states, some of them being sent from poor people. One box contained several striped handkerchiefs. "You know," Yeager said, "I appreciate these presents, even the handkerchiefs, but I've formed such a dislike for stripes during the last five years that I had to give them away."

Machine Induces Slumber

Dr. Hans Salomon, of Berlin, has patented a "slumber machine," an apparatus which produces a humming sound like that of a hive of bees. When wound up it runs from 40 to 45 minutes, gradually becoming slower and softer. Doctors have confirmed the satisfactory results obtained in insomnia cases.

Being Well Shod More
Important Than Ever

Being well shod has become one of the important items to the well-groomed woman. Today the shoe takes second place to no other part of the wardrobe, but must be given as much attention in itself and in its relation to the ensemble as the frock or hat.

Every woman knows that shoes are the most difficult articles to select. They are not as interesting as hats and gowns, yet they play an all-important role in the smart woman's wardrobe. They must be comfortable first, look good on the foot and also carry out the costume idea by matching or blending with the color or detail of the costume.

Gertrude Olmsted, the motion-picture actress, one of the best-shod women in the world, gives some valuable tips on being well shod. Here are some "dos and don'ts" from the well-known player.

"Don't allow the heels to overbalance you. When you try on a pair of slippers be sure that the heels do not throw you too far forward or too far backward.

"If you want your ankles to look slim be sure that the ramps of your shoes are long and slender and that bows or buckles do not break the line from toe to ankle.

"If your foot is short and broad avoid elaborate slippers. Plain black or white or beige pumps are much more becoming to this type of foot than the many-strapped slipper.

"Flat heels for sports wear, Cuban heels for the street, extremely high French heels for evening! I want to make that emphatic, a few women realize how important this is. A French heel can ruin the smartest sports outfit.

"When you buy shoes that are too small for your feet remember that you fool no one but yourself. Comfort is the big consideration. Comfort improves not only the line of the foot, but the disposition as well. Too much foot for the shoe detracts from the most effective costume."

Many Accessories That
Are Admired by Women

Brilliant buckles on belts, heels made entirely of rhinestones, and flowers fashioned of rubber are only a few of the new developments which make the mode so interesting and so different from the fashions of yesterday. The buckle, strange as it may seem, often is attached to a belt of beige suede for the frock of kasha in the soft neutral tone that is the height of smartness. Rubber flowers come in many colors and are intended for wear on fur coats.

The place of shoes in the mode never has been so important. One's footwear should not only be in harmony with the costume, but also suitable to the occasion. Shoes for morning, afternoon and evening are distinct types. A splendid shoe for walking or for the country is of brown calf with heavy perforated bands and a buckle placed at the side of the single wide strap. For afternoon, satin in a new tone of bronze, overcast with a grayish tinge, is well liked. For evening, black moire with a heel made of brilliants is chosen to complete the black and white vogue.

Knitted Sports Suits Popular

At this time of year, the knitted sports garments come into their own. Most of them have skirts of misty gray or green over which are worn jumpers of the brightest patterns. The Highland plaids are utilized for some of these. Fancy lisle or lisle and silk stockings with colored figures of blue or green shades are used.

OUT OF ORDER SURE

Ethel—Why are you so sure the scales must be out of order, dear?
May—Why, they have me weighing five pounds more than the last time!

Easy Money

"If I had your head," a fan cried out, To the dumb-bell Casey Jones; 'I'd break it in a thousand bits, And make a thousand bones."

Up-to-Date

"There!" said the man who had silenced his opponent. "I guess that took the wind out of his sails."
"Be modern," returned his companion. "You mean you let the wind out of his tires."

CARD PARTY

The fourth of a series of entertainments planned by the Pickaway County Chapter of the American Red Cross for the patients at Veterans' Hospital No. 97, at Camp Sherman, was held yesterday afternoon.

The hostesses for this occasion were, Mrs. T. O. Gilliland, Mrs. T. F. Jeffries, Mrs. Bert Lyle, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. Mary G. Morris, Mrs. Irma Gehres, Miss Flora Palm, Miss Martha Crist, Miss Madeline Trump, Miss Agnes Butch. Cards were the diversion of the afternoon and the conclusion of the games refreshments of cake, candy and cigarettes were served. It is needless to say that the inmates of this hospital were very grateful for the diversion. The next entertainment planned will be a musical under the direction of Miss Abbe Mills Clarke, the date of which has not been definitely announced.

BAR PUBLIC FROM
REMUS HEARING

Cincinnati, Feb. 3.—A mother's love spoke in defense of her boy in his hour of need when Mrs. Marie Remus, mother of George Remus, Cincinnati bootleg king, testified before Thomas Thomas, U. S. immigration director, in an effort to save him from being deported. Although she is 77 years old, Mrs. Remus willingly made the trip from Chicago to testify. She said "George was always a fine boy" in reviewing his life.

The hearing was held behind closed doors and the public, including newspaper men, was excluded.

The government contends that Remus was over the legal age—21 years—when his father, Frank Remus, was naturalized in the Cook county court, Chicago, on March 24, 1899, and therefore did not inherit his father's citizenship. It further contends that his violation of the prohibition act made him guilty of moral turpitude and an undesirable alien.

GRASSHOPPERS, ONCE PEST,
NOW MISSED IN WYOMING

Cowboy State Now Ready to Declare Truce With Ancient Enemy and Welcome Them Back.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Wyoming wants more grasshoppers. The cowboy state is ready not only to declare a truce with its ancient enemy, but to bid the pest welcome home to the Big Horn basin.

In the Wyoming of antiquity the hoppers flew in clouds thick enough to obscure the sun. Five years ago the basin had plenty. The plague did its annual damage to farm crops. Turkeys were introduced to combat the insects, and did so successfully. They routed the hoppers from the farm land and pursued the depleted insect army to mountain terrain.

Now a severe decline threatens the grasshopper crop and lamentations are being heard from the ranchmen, who, in the meantime have discovered that they can reap enormous profits from turkeys, grown half wild on the grasshopper range in the mountain foothills. The turkey growing industry has increased by leaps and bounds; grasshoppers have accordingly declined. Grasshopper preserves for the propagation of turkey food are a possibility of the future.

Big Horn basin turkeys, excelling others because the climate and food conditions found in the basin make it a natural paradise for turkeys, already are famous all over the United States for their superiority. They are sought eagerly by dealers, who pay exceptional prices to the growers, 41 cents a pound being the 1925 rate. Big Horn basin ranchmen can grow rich on turkeys if only they can produce enough fowls. An unlimited number of fowls can be produced if only the grasshopper range bears up. As matters are, production cost is one-third, or less, of the selling price. And turkeys prefer grasshoppers.

Feed Beef for Spring Market

Plan Is Favored Because of Low Price of Cottonseed Meal and Hulls.

Because of the low price of cottonseed meal and hulls this winter, winter feeding of beef cattle for the spring market might be a good venture for farmers who are favorably located for the work.

Favorable Fattening Dates.

"The most favorable dates for fattening beef cattle are between November 1 and March 1," says Prof. R. S. Curtis, animal husbandman at the North Carolina State college. "Cattle do better in the winter months and there is not so much danger in feeding the meal. Those who wish to begin this work should do so at once, otherwise the finishing period may extend over into the warm months. Conditions then are less favorable for feeding cottonseed meal, farmers are busy in spring and the manure must be hauled out at an unfavorable time."

Professor Curtis states that when one starts to feed beef cattle with the meal, each animal should be given one pound daily and the amount be gradually increased so that a full ration be given at the end of 30 days. A safe rule to follow for the full ration is one pound of meal to each 100 pounds live weight of animal, using 2 1/2 to 3 pounds of hulls for each pound of cottonseed meal used. Where farm roughages are available the hulls should be decreased. It requires from 90 to 120 days to put a decent finish on beef cattle. Rations should be given them twice daily and water and salt kept before them at all times.

Gain of Beef Animal.

A beef animal should gain from 160 to 200 pounds during a feeding period of 120 days and under average conditions there should be a margin of two cents per pound between the buying and selling price. Most feeders figure that if they can break even and have the manure clear with 80 to 85 per cent of the fertilizing constituents of the meal in it, they have done a good piece of work. The finished animals are usually marketed during the early spring.

Calf Feeds Necessary to Make Rapid Growth

If a calf eight weeks old is to make rapid growth it will be necessary to feed it some milk with grain and hay. If it is impossible to feed it milk it will make a fairly good growth on the following mixture: Shelled corn, 30 pounds; oats, 30 pounds; wheat bran 30 pounds, and linseed meal, 30 pounds. Mix and let the calf have all it will clean up without waste. The oats and corn may also be ground if desired. The calf should have all the bright clover hay it will eat and also all the water it will drink. Alfalfa hay can be fed instead of the clover hay, but it is not so good for young calves as is clover hay, since it is much richer in protein, which in some cases, does not agree with the calf. The calf should have a clean box stall and have plenty of sunlight.

Feed Adult Geese for Eggs Along in February

Adult geese should be fed for eggs about February 1, or so that the goslings will be hatched by the time there is good grass pasture. In feeding for eggs give a mash of equal parts by weight of corn meal, bran, and middlings or low-grade flour with 10 per cent of beef scrap. In the morning, and a feed of corn at night. A constant supply of drinking water should be provided. If geese need grain when not laying, the beef scrap should be left out and the corn meal increased in this ration to three parts.

Cull Out Poor Sows

It will not pay to carry sows through the winter if they are not satisfactory pig raisers. Sows that for any reason are not raising good litters should be fattened and sent to market. Old sows that are past the age of greatest usefulness should be replaced in the breeding herd by good gilts. Blindness, bad udders and sluggish disposition are frequently found with old sows. A sluggish, lazy sow is more apt to injure or kill her pigs.

FARM NOTES

One way to save labor is to put it on the best land. . . .

To keep the loafer hens from eating up the profits why not eat up the loafer hens? . . .

The term unit as applied to fertilizers means 1 per cent or 20 pounds in a ton. . . .

A farm inventory is the first step in keeping farm accounts. On the average farm it requires about one-half a day to take it. . . .

Many dairymen consider buckwheat middlings equal to gluten feed for milk production. They have about the same total feed value as wheat bran. . . .

The comparatively high prices that have been paid for summer milk for the past few years have had a tendency to make a shortage of winter milk now. . . .

HENRY T.
CHITTENDEN

Made Defendant In Divorce Suit Filed In New York City.

Henry Treat Chittenden, a member of a pioneer Columbus family, has been sued for divorce in the courts of New York City by Vannessi Jardiniere, a dancer who was featured three years ago in "Innocent Eyes," a New York production, according to advices from that city.

In this petition, Chittenden, who was associated with the law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft at the time of his marriage, and is now said to be connected with the banking offices of Hayden, Stone & Co., is accused of certain indiscretions in an apartment within a few blocks of his own home, 136 East 67th street.

Chittenden is the son of Henry T. Chittenden, after whom the Chittenden hotel of Columbus was named. He was the grandson by marriage of the late E. T. Mithoff, who during his life was the largest owner of real estate in Columbus. His mother was Henrietta Bassell, daughter of John Y. Bassell, for many years secretary of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. After her separation from the elder Chittenden she married Police Commissioner Bugher, of New York, from whom she inherited nearly a million dollars.

The marriage of Chittenden took place Jan. 1, 1924, at Taunton, Mass., but was not announced until four months later after he and his bride had spent their honeymoon in Bermuda. Chittenden at that time was in the diplomatic service of the federal government. The late Countess Pucelli and Campbell M. Chittenden were his half sister and brother.

Something to Hope For

One member of a fishing party was an Irishman who disagreed very badly with the sea.

"It's all right, old man," said another member of the party; "you're not dead yet."

"True," moaned the sufferer, "but it's only the hope of dying keeps me alive."—Graphic.

Not Much to Turn Over

The supper table was set and Mrs. Professor was awaiting the arrival of her husband. "What can be keeping him so late?" she asked.

Daughter—Maybe he's been held up.

Bright Son—Well, he'll soon be here then; that won't take long.

Higher Chemistry

"I see the druggist has his head chemist in consultation."

"Yes."

"Must be something important."

"It is. They are working on a fountain drink which combines ice cream and tobacco."

Story Accepted

"That author fellow has had a story accepted at last," remarked one man to another.

"Surely not!" was the rejoinder.

"Yes. He went home at two o'clock this morning with an awful yarn, and his wife believed it."—London Tit-Bits.
